The crew, consisting of a pilot and mechanic who gave their names as H. L. Wells and Joe Comland, respectively, but were rather averse to talking about the business bringing them to this northern country in winter. They claimed to have come from New Jersey and were bound for some point north of Newport. They also claimed to be making delivery of the machine, which was a 130 horse power plane equipped with a French (Rotary) motor, a 36 foot wing spread and a large carrying capacity. The plane was making an average of 110 miles an hour, and came to Barton from Lake Morey in Fairlee in about 30 minutes.

The plane made a get-away Tuesday afternoon after some difficulty, using ordinary gasoline for fuel.

Nearly a hundred guests sat down at tables with good food and good things. The toastmaster of the occasion was Wallace H. Gilpin. His remarks and stories were both wise and witty. He commended the town for turning our snowy winter into a source of enjoyment. He declared that northern Vermont is a great field for winter sports and cited Canada as an example of what can be done in this way. He said that all it needed was the right community spirit, a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together, in any town to do some thing to break the winter's monotony and have grand good times in spite of zero weather. He congratulated the driving club for helping put Glover on the map of Vermont.
